EMPLOYEE/STUDENT RECORD INTEGRITY

In order to preserve the privilege afforded to Apollo Group employees and their spouses to pursue their educational goals tuition-free or at a reduced rate, it is essential that each participating employee or spouse abide by the conditions of participation outlined in the Apollo Employee Handbook. Additionally, we would like to emphasize the following expectations:

1. Participating employees must not ask for or expect any preferential treatment toward themselves or their spouses in relation to program requirements, including but not limited to requesting rush services of any sort on your or your spouse's behalf, attendance, grading, participation in directed studies, or satisfaction of incomplete grades. Employees are also subject to the same policies as all other students with regard to scheduling, course waivers, exemptions, transfer credits, and assessed credits.

Additionally, if you require customer service or record updates, you are to go through the Centralized Employee Team only. The Employee Team is responsible for your student account. This includes accessing information in all student administration systems and all paperwork associated with these records. Asking a colleague to process any paperwork or update your account is not permitted. You should not go through Apollo Tech Support directly for systems issues regarding your record (outside of classroom setup or posting issues) or through central administration departments for service issues as a means to bypass the responsible campus regarding your record. Under no circumstances is an employee student allowed to access his or her own records, or those of his or her spouse. Because we are employed by Apollo, we must hold ourselves to a higher standard and avoid even the appearance of receiving preferential treatment.

2. The teaching/learning model of our institutions emphasizes the use of the student's work experience as a context for completing assignments and participating in class discussions and activities. Reflecting on past and current professional experience in relation to new knowledge is an effective and important part of the adult learning process. Apollo employees and their spouses are encouraged to be active participants in their courses. All students, including Apollo employees and spouses, are expected to use good judgment and common sense in sharing information about their organizations in discussions and assignments. Our modules and faculty standards contain the following language:

Students and faculty members do not share present or past employer information that would be considered proprietary, confidential, company-sensitive, or protected trade secrets. Students are encouraged to examine their organization's limitations on sharing information externally.

In this regard, faculty members do not consider it acceptable for students, who in many cases are having their tuition paid for by their employers, to share confidential information or to use language that disparages or demeans their employers, or that portrays their companies in a negative light. Apollo employees and spouses are expected to honor these same expectations.

3. Apollo employees and spouses are expected to fully abide by their respective code of student conduct. Our employees are under special obligation not to be disruptive influences in the classroom and to be sure that their part in the academic discourse is civil and respectful.

Employees or their spouses whose behaviors are not consistent with these expectations will no longer be eligible to receive tuition benefits. We have asked our faculty to report any code of conduct violations to our Human Resources department, at which time employee tuition assistance will be terminated permanently. Following these procedures will help us maintain the highest ethical standards and minimize any perception of wrongdoing.

EMPLOYEE STUDENT WORK HOURS POLICY ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

POLICY GOVERNING EMPLOYEE STUDENTS:

- All Apollo staff members are NOT to attend courses during their normal 40-hour work week.
- Employees in good standing may be granted permission by management to use their lunch breaks to attend classes. This policy requires employees to notify their immediate supervisors each time they are going to attend courses online at their desks during the lunch hour. Please see your immediate supervisor for any additional requirements associated with this policy.
- It is unacceptable for any employee to attend courses during non-break periods of the work day.
- Attending SAS residencies is considered "attending courses." As such, an employee student wishing to attend a SAS residency must take approved vacation in order to do so.
- The Acceptable Use policy, which is found in the Apollo Employee Handbook, states that misuse of company resources in prohibited.

IN THE EVENT THAT AN EMPLOYEE VIOLATES THIS POLICY THE FOLLOWING CONSEQUENCES MAY OCCUR:

For employee students:

- A discussion memo or a written warning will be issued to the employee.
- Per the Employee Handbook, "An employee who has received a written warning or has been placed on decision making leave. . .is not eligible for a tuition waiver or discount for a six-month period following the receipt of discipline (warning or notice of decision making leave) or until a new evaluation with a "meets expectations" or higher rating has been achieved."

I acknowledge that I understand that attending courses at University of Phoenix, Axia College of University of Phoenix, or Western International University Associate Programs is considered course work, and it is against company policy, specifically the Employee Student Work Hours Policy, to attend class during my scheduled work hours as an employee of Apollo Group.
